Climate change and global warming

Global warming refers to rising sea and land temperatures. The Earth is getting warmer. These increases in temperature have been well documented since the 20th century. Since 1970 the rate of warming has increased more rapidly than before. This increase in temperature is believed to be changing the climate we experience on Earth.

Climate change is a complex phenomenon and it is difficult to predict the full impact it will have on our lives. Scientists believe that climate change will affect our water resources, energy supplies, agriculture, transportation, and health in the future. Climate change is causing ice caps to melt, leading to rising sea levels. This particularly affects low-lying countries such as the Maldives.

Most scientists agree that global warming is the result of human activities on Earth. Human beings and the machines that they use are giving off increasing amounts of harmful gases. The burning of fossil fuels is one of the main areas of concerns.
