PART TWO: CATEGORY OF ACTIONS

SECTION C: READING COMPREHENSION

Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions which follow it

Water moves around the globe as part of the water cycle that affects the climate both regionally and globally. The main stages of this cycle are evaporation, transfer of water to the atmosphere, condensation, precipitation, run-off, storage and infiltration. Water is stored in oceans, seas and lakes in rivers, channels and in the ground. Evaporation turns water into water vapour. Water in the ground and on the surface evaporates, for example, as living creatures transpire, notably plants which give off the water they accumulate.

Precipitation occurs when the water vapour in the air condenses and falls as rain, snow and hail. Run-off is the movement of water downhill. This includes water flowing in rivers, on the ground, and in the ground. By changing the hydrological cycle, constructing new dams, converting existing bodies of water to agricultural land, clearing forests, expanding urban areas, we damage our fresh water resources.
