Social media and you

Social media play an important role in communication, discovery, engagement and learning and you cannot get away from them. They are everywhere these days and for many reasons, have become a major part of the social and academic life of the teenagers.

First of all, social media enable teenagers to improve their communication and socialisation skills. Via social media, teenagers can remain connected to their friends and family, both close by and far away. They can also develop new friendships and learn to exchange ideas in a dynamic way. Through the use of social media sites, teens can practice their individual communication styles. This promotes the development of personal identity.

Secondly, offer teens the opportunity to discover the things beyond the limit of their school and community. Social media open up a larger world full of experiences, communities and culture that may be new teens and can help them better understand the world and its diversity.

Thirdly, young people can engage directly with public figure or people they admire through twitter blogs. This interaction can motivate and inspire young people.

Finally, social media also have a great deal to offer in the way of education. They offer different means of learning that are difficult to achieve in the school environment.
