Read the following passage and answer the questions which follow; Use your own words as far as possible.

There is no doubt that Cameroon needs healthy young men and women to sustain its economy. We all know is not compatible with good health.

Many of the diseases we suffer from now are alcohol- related. There is not a single patient who on discharge from hospital does not go home with the the instruction “do not drink alcohol”. Whether these instructions are ever taken serious, remains to be seen. Alcohol does not only affect the liver and other vital organs of the body but it has been proven by doctors to have an irreparably damaging action on the brain . Here, the level of thinking become low-a very regrettable thing for any progressive people.

What is particularly worrying is the period at which most of us drink. It is not unusual to find people drinking as early as 6.30 a.m; an exercise that keeps out any breakfast , while most addicts return to their home as late as 7 a.m each day of the week. The number of drunken persons usually seen staggering or lying helplessly on our streets because of excessive drinking is alarming . Some people still sneak out of offices during working hours to drink to the detriment of those waiting in front of their offices to have their files processed .

Besides, whole families are now separating because one of the partners cannot give up or at least reduce his rate of consumption of alcohol. Money which would otherwise be used to maintain the family continues to be directed in to the happy house of liquor dealers. It now seems that some kind of campaign on the hazards of alcohol is necessary.

SECTION D: COMPOSITION (10mks)

Write a composition on the social and economic consequences of too much drinking of alcohol or alcohol abuse.

Social and Economic Consequences of Alcohol Abuse

Alcohol abuse has severe social and economic consequences on individuals, families, and society as a whole. Firstly, excessive drinking leads to serious health problems such as liver damage, brain dysfunction, and other chronic diseases. These health issues not only reduce the quality of life but also increase medical expenses, putting a financial burden on families.

Secondly, alcohol abuse disrupts family life. It often leads to conflicts, domestic violence, and even separation or divorce. Children in such families suffer emotionally and academically, as their parents are unable to provide proper care and support.

Economically, alcohol abuse results in lost productivity. Workers who drink excessively are often absent from work or perform poorly, leading to job loss and reduced income. This, in turn, affects the overall economy as the workforce becomes less efficient.

To address this problem, public awareness campaigns should be launched to educate people about the dangers of alcohol abuse. Governments should also implement stricter regulations on alcohol sales and provide support for those struggling with addiction. Rehabilitation centers and counseling services should be made accessible to help individuals recover and reintegrate into society.

By tackling alcohol abuse, we can improve health, strengthen families, and boost economic productivity.
