Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions below it, using your own words as far as you can.

Most of the young women in some areas of Mobololand speak simple English, but are unable to read and write. As children, they had no opportunity to go to school, but as time goes on, they are beginning to be interested in reading, writing English and French. "It is never too late to learn", said Aisha, a young lady from Mobololand. "People here used to think that women's education was important. For the people of my area, women ought to stay at home, do the housework, get married, and have children."

"I have no time for such beliefs", replied Mariama. "Those who say those things make me angry. Look at Mrs Egogo, the Maths teacher in our school village; she has no husband and earns her living very well. When you go to the city, you find so many women teachers, doctors, engineers, and even architects."

"Many families in my area are very poor", said Amira. When money is available for education, it is the boys who are the first to have their fees paid. It is said that girls will soon get support from their husbands."

"Look at my case: My father Amadou has two children, a boy and me, and he could not send both of us to school because he is too poor. In addition, my mother is always sick and cannot take care of the home. So my father needs me at home. What would you do if you were him?"

When a girl does not go through formal education, she cannot read a magazine, write letters, or read instructions on a medicine packet. If she wants to read or write a letter, she gets someone to do it for her. So she has no privacy, since people know about her private life.

A new school for adult women is going to be opened in a village near Mobololand. The only entrance qualification for the school is the desire to learn. Mama Myriam, aged 45, has a lot of that! She says that her education will help her family: "I will never have a problem with my husband because we both earn money and there will be peace in the family. Even when I have a good education, I will always obey and respect my husband", she concludes.

Subject: Application for Free Computer Training

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing on behalf of the youths in Gombe Village to apply for the free computer training sessions offered by the American Embassy. Most of the youths in our village lack basic computer skills, which limits their opportunities for employment and further education.

We believe that this training will greatly benefit our community by equipping the youths with essential computer skills. We would need computers, internet access, and a qualified trainer to conduct the sessions. The training could be organized in the village hall, which is spacious and accessible to all.

Thank you for considering our application. We look forward to your positive response.

Yours faithfully,
Hawa Essono
