SECTION C : READING (10 mks)

Read this passage carefully and answer the following questions.

Mechanized Agriculture is Better.

Many people have once realized that mechanised agriculture should be the order of the day throughout the world. This is because with this form of agriculture, a lesser input is required for a very high output. It has been the leading method of farming over the years. In this type of agriculture, cultivation is well organised. Every crop is cultivated on a separate piece of land. No two crops are planted on the same piece of land. The crops are able to grow and sprout normally, since they do not face competition for water, air, and minerals from other crops. They are natural and usually pure offspring of the parent crop.

Also crops are properly taken care of. It is natural in every living organism for changes to take place. These can be good or bad. The changes can be caused by the influence of the environment on plants, or other causes crops cultivated are treated with pesticides to enable them grow well. They are also treated with other natural plant supplements to grow and be resistant. With all these, crops grow healthy and produce the best quality of nutrients expected of them.

Furthermore, harvesting and storage are well organised and controlled. Crops are harvested carefully so as to avoid wounding of the flesh. This ensures that food crops are harvested carefully so as to avoid wounding of the flesh. This ensures that food crops harvested should last for up to a reasonable number of days without deteriorating or being infected as a result of wounding. Proper harvesting also ensures that the crops are harvested when they are just ready to be harvested. This means that premature harvesting of crops is not entertained in mechanized agriculture. After harvesting, the crops are properly processed and stored under controlled conditions for future use.

It is important to acknowledge the fact that most food reserves in the world today are as a result of mechanised farming.

To say the least Mechanised farming is the key to eradicating the rampant food crisis in the world. If all governments of the world adopt this method of agriculture, poverty and unemployment will reduce.
