Tolerating and Accepting one Another.

It is possible to tolerate somebody or something we don't like. Accepting is realizing that you don't like an opinion or a situation, but you live with it without complaining. Tolerating can sometimes make you feel unhappy. It helps us to show a neutral attitude towards those who have a different religion, education, race or gender from us. Tolerance helps to maintain peace and avoid aggression. This is why we tolerate something we don't have the power to change. While accepting leaves you peaceful and contented. Self-acceptance is being satisfied with oneself. Social acceptance is accepting the differences and diversity of others. We cannot accept without tolerating but we can tolerate without accepting. Let's tolerate and accept one another for the sake of peace in Cameroon our beloved country.

Dear [Friend's Name],

I hope this message finds you well. I wanted to share with you about my recent trip to Nkambe, a beautiful touristic site in my village. I had planned to stay there for two weeks to enjoy the scenic views and relax, but unfortunately, I had to cut my trip short.

I visited Nkambe last month during the dry season when the weather was perfect for hiking and exploring. The site is known for its breathtaking landscapes, including lush green hills, waterfalls, and traditional huts. I was particularly excited to visit the famous Nkambe Rock, which offers a panoramic view of the entire village. My main reason for visiting was to escape the busy city life and reconnect with nature.

However, just a few days into my trip, I received a call from my parents asking me to return home immediately due to an urgent family matter. I was disappointed because I had planned to explore more of the area, but family comes first. I hope to visit Nkambe again in the future and spend more time there.

Take care, and I hope to see you soon!

Best regards,
Your Name
