SECTION C: READING COMPREHENSION( 10 MARKS)

Read the text carefully and answer the questions below.

CHILDREN HAVE RIGHTS, DON'T THEY?

All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights'. These words from the Universal Declaration of Human Rights promise all people a life that is free from want and fear. We celebrate this every year on Human Rights Day. We celebrate the fact that we have certain basic rights. However there are still many children in the world who do not enjoy their rights. Think about the children who are forced to join armies at an early age, for example.

According to Amnesty International there are currently more than 300,000 children (people under the age of 18) fighting in wars in West and Central Africa, the Balkans, Latin America, Sri Lanka and Afghanistan. More than 15,000 children are fighting in Colombia alone. UNICEF reports that around 8,000 children have been kidnapped in Uganda since 1995 and forced to fight in civil wars in the area. The children are often recruited into rebel armies in areas where there is civil unrest. The children are usually from poor rural families.

Young children are recruited because they obey orders more easily than adults and they are not paid. They eat less food than adults and they are often not afraid to carry out dangerous missions because they do not understand the dangers involved. Rebel armies use children as spies and they use them to trap other people because most people trust children.

The life of a child soldier is exceedingly harsh. The children are given drugs and alcohol to which they become addicted. They are forced to commit terrible acts such as killing members of their own families. They are often injured from doing heavy work and they also contract sexually transmitted diseases if they are used as sex slaves.

Some of these children are eventually set free, but it is very difficult for them to adjust to a normal life after what they have experienced. Many of them have grown up fighting and they know no other life.

So while we celebrate our achievements in the area of human rights, spare a thought for the child who don't enjoy these rights.

QUESTIONS

1. What does the Universal Declaration of Human Rights promise all people? 1MARK

2. True or false? All children have the same rights but these rights are not always respected.
