COMPETENCE : Read the text very carefully and provide answers to the questions below.

CROSSING A CHEQUE

Many people ask the question : 'Is it safe to write and accept cheque ?' The answer is simple. As with all financial transactions. There are dangers and you need to be aware of these dangers. Cheques are a convenient way of dealing with transactions as many people won't like to carry a lot of cash around and everyone has or likes to use a credit card.

Some of the dangers are : Cheque can get lost or stolen. The Cheques can also fall into the wrong hands and cause you to lost money. So to prevent all these dangers, you have to prevent these by crossing the cheques.

Crossing is a simple way to protect the drawer and payee of a Cheque. Crossing of Cheque prevents fraud and wrong payments. Grossing a cheque means drawing two parallel lines across the face of the cheque. Crossed cheque may only be deposited at the bank into the account of the payee. No body can present a crossed Cheque at a bank and receive cash.

There are different ways of crossing a cheque. Generally, a Cheque is crossed when two parallel lines are drawn across the face of the cheque. Words such as 'S Co. Not negociable' 'or' A//C, payee only'' can also be written between the two parallel lines.

The other danger with cheque is that the drawer may not sufficient funds in his or her account. If this happens, the Cheque will 'bounce' and the payee will not get the money. The drawer can get in to trouble with the bank for writing cheques that bounce. For example, their account may be closed and they will have to pay additional bank charges. Cheques accounts need to be used in an honest and responsible way.
