SECTION A: GRAMMAR (10 MARKS)

A – Complete this dialogue on job interview. (5 marks)

Employer: Good morning Mr. Mbah. Please take a seat.

Candidate: Good morning sir. It's a pleasure to meet you.

Employer: Ok, can you tell me _____

Candidate: I'm a customer of your company and I think you give excellent service. I want to work in a company which cares about its employees and its clients. I'm looking for a part-time job to help me through college.

Employer: Could you _____

Candidate: I am 19 years old. I come from Ndop and I study architecture. I want to be an architect in the future.

Employer: What is _____?

Candidate: I have always helped my parents in their shop. I assisted customers, ordered products and put them in the shelves. Last summer, I also worked in a restaurant as a waiter, so I believe I have much experience in serving clients.

Employer: Very well. _____

Candidate: Yes, I don't mind it. I can work in the morning and in the evening. No problem.

Employer: _____

Candidate: I'm really hard-working and I like working with people. I'm very patient and polite, so clients likes me. What's more, I know many foreign languages: German, French, and a little bit of Spanish, so I can attend customers from other countries.

Employer: _____

Candidate: Unfortunately, sometimes I'm late and I'm not good at computers.

Employer: That's ok. Now, do you have any question you'd like to ask me about the position?

sujetexa.com

Candidate: Yes. _____

Employer: Well, we work in two shifts. The first is from 6 am to 2 pm, and the second starts at 2 pm and finishes at 10 pm. Is it ok?

Candidate: Yes, that sounds very good. When will I know if I have been successful?

Employer: we will call you on Friday. Thank you very much.

Why to learn the second official language?

I think the importance of understanding the second official language and using it proficiently at work dawned on me rather late. What an awful mistake it was! I must confess that my attitude had been to joke with my friends. "L'anglais c'est quoi?" we would say. That summarised my defiance and disregard for the second official language. I should have known better! Needless to say, I barely got by with my assignments and tests in English. I somehow managed to scrape 10/20 on my BEPC examination. And I began to wish that the boys and girls I had joked with had taken a different attitude. The turnaround for me came in the second cycle, when I had a brilliant young English teacher. She had just graduated from university and I believe the whole class had a crush on her! On her first day of class, she administered a survey to evaluate our different language levels and needs. Then she made what was, to us an incredible revelation.

She told us about the importance of English as a world language. After she had talked to us about English as the language of technology, science, travel, music and so on, I was sold on the language. What an incredible tool was being placed at our disposal. The whole class sat up from that moment on. And by the time we finisher the second cycle, we were communicating competently in English. Only after I finished university and started work in a large private firm, did I fully realise the requirements of obtaining my joy was competence in the second language. The company I work for has a people-centred approach to work. I need to use English every day, so my language skills have to be up to scratch. There are high-level meetings at which the CEO uses her first language, which is English. There are partners, officials and customers who we deal with in English. The language in which they are the most comfortable. This guarantees customer satisfaction.

I am happy that my skills in the second language help me to make a contribution to the company. That is why I encourage all young people in our country to take the learning of the second language very seriously. It will bring positive dividends for them in their future careers.
